Love in the Seat of Empire

Black Diasporic Survival as a Radical Practice

By Rev. Terence Mayo

"Black love is... transnational: a radical, border-crossing practice that insists we are bound to one another across oceans, languages, and histories of extraction."

A New Book by PSR Alum Mary Dyer

Walls or Windows shines a light on the othering that occurs when people are different from societal norms," writes author Mary Dyer. "As a gay and late-deafened woman, I offer firsthand accounts of my experiences alternating with histories and milestones in deaf and LGBT exclusion, challenging the status quo, acceptance, and advancements. This book, seen through the lens of both the Deaf and LGBT experiences, urges the reader to see the divine in each person, with their differences enhancing them rather than limiting them. The gifts these individuals contribute to society make the world a more beautiful, compelling place."

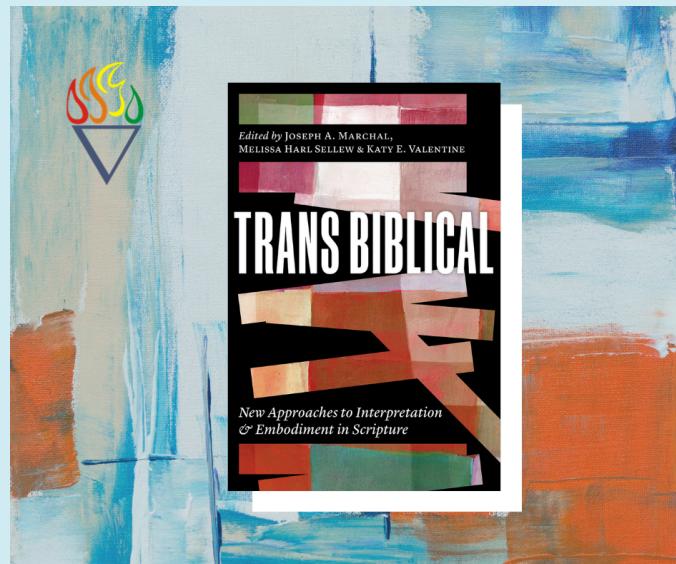

This book is available through Barnes and Noble, Amazon, and Good Faith Media.

WALLS or WINDOWS

Are the Deaf and LGBT Communities "Wholly Other" or "Holy Other"?
